Dress Code

Before you say a single word to the interviewer, you have already made an impression based on how you're dressed.

- Please do not smoke 30 minutes before the interview
- Be at least 10 -15 minutes early for the interview
- When in the Reception, take note of what is going on Reception, have a look at all the certificates, and the companies achievements, it makes for a good starting point in the interview and it shows that you are interested in the company.
- Please do some research on the company for the interviewer to see that you show interest in the company

Men

- Dress in a manner that is professionally appropriate to the position for which you are applying. It is rarely appropriate to "dress down" for an interview, regardless of company dress code policy. When in doubt, go conservative.
- You should wear a suit to interviews. "Suit" means the works: a matching jacket and pants, dress shirt, tie, coordinating socks and dress shoes. A dark-coloured suit with light coloured shirt is your best option.
- Your suit should be comfortable and fit you well so that you look and act your best. There is a difference between not yet feeling at ease in a suit and trying to fit into the same suit you wore to your sister's wedding when you were 15. (In the latter case, it's time to invest in a new suit!)
- Avoid loud colours and flashy ties.
- Wear deodorant. Don't wear cologne or aftershave. You don't want to smell overpowering or worse, cause an allergic reaction.
- Make sure you have fresh breath. Don't smoke right before an interview.
- Your hair should be neat, clean, and conservative.
- A good rule of thumb is to dress like your boss. Shoes should be well-polished and in good condition, not scuffed or run-down at the heels. They should also match your belt. Dressing professionally shows respect for yourself, the interviewer, and the company. You may not have to dress like this every day, but you are more likely to be taken seriously when you present yourself in a professional manner and take the time to attend to details.

Women

- Generally, you should wear a suit with a skirt or pants. When in doubt, be more conservative.
- Interview suits should be simple and dark in colour. Anything tight, bright, short, or sheer should absolutely be avoided. (Interviewers have been known to complain about the length of interviewees' skirts; if you have any doubts, it's probably too short.) Knee-length skirts are suggested. Very long skirts, while modest, are also considered too trendy for an interview.
- Wear a conservative blouse with your suit. Do not wear bright colours, animal prints, or anything lacy, sheer, or low-cut.
- Make-up and nail polish should be understated and flattering
- Keep your jewellery and hair accessories to a minimum, and stick to those that are not flashy, distracting, or shiny.
- Shoes should be conservative and fairly low-heeled. Don't wear shoes with an open toe or back. A basic pump is flattering, versatile
- Dress in a manner that is professionally appropriate to the position for which you are applying. In almost all cases, this means wearing a suit. It is rarely appropriate to "dress down" for an interview, regardless of company dress code policy. When in doubt, go conservative (is this starting to sound familiar?).
- Wear deodorant. Don't wear perfume: you don't want to smell overpowering or worse, cause an allergic reaction.
- Make sure you have fresh breath. Brush your teeth before you leave for the interview, and don't eat or smoke before the interview.
- Your hair should be neat, clean, and conservatively styled. The idea is to look polished and professional, not to advertise what a creative genius your hairdresser is.
- Tell me about yourself..." Be prepared to talk for two minutes about yourself. Be logical. The interviewer is trying to evaluate your communication skills and linear thinking. You may try to score a point or two by describing a major personal attribute.

- "Why are you leaving your current position?" This is a very critical question. Don't bad mouth your previous employer or co-workers or sound too opportunistic. It's fine to mention major problems, a buy-out or a shutdown.
- Why do you believe you are qualified for this position?" Pick two or three main factors about the job and about yourself that are most relevant. Discuss for two minutes, including specific details. You may mention a technical skill, a management skill and/or a personal success story

Good Luck!!!
